A Club Centered Around Helping Stray Animals is Coming to the University of Oklahoma

A New Initiative to Help Norman's Local Animal Shelters in 2022

NORMAN, OK— Aiding Animals, a potential new student-led club, plans to officially submit paperwork to start its new organization which aims to decrease the number of stray animals in Norman, OK by 25% by the end of 2022. The organization, just getting off the ground, plans to be up and running by the spring semester of 2022.

Madison Snow, founder of Aiding Animals, said she “knew there was a problem surrounding the number of stray animals in our community yet there is nothing being done within our campus to help combat it,” (Snow). This is where she got the idea to start something centered around other students who have the same passion for animals while finding them a forever home.

Through philanthropy, fundraising and education, Aiding Animals hopes to create a more fostering and inviting environment that surrounds pet adoption and animal shelters. They believe the best way to do that is by promoting change and implementing the tools to do so.

About Aiding Animals

The Aiding Animals club is based out of Norman, Oklahoma and is centered around the University of Oklahoma's students. Founded by a group of driven young adults, this club is working to help decrease the number of stray animals in their community through philanthropy, fundraising, and education. Aiding Animals is taking a necessary step in the right direction to give back to the animals that live in the community.
